

NEGLECTED DIMENSIONS
Rough Sketches for Public Space
PAUL CARTER

Poet, dramaturge and public artist, Paul Carter, writes and draws public space as a movement form, representing the neglected dimensions of the meeting place. His poetics of the trace finds a superb visual metaphor in John Warwicker's book design.

The essay is a drawing out of implications in the sketches, a suspension of related but different thematic molecules, from which on a 'like to like' principle, sketches are periodically hatched. Colloidal structures are formed at the interface between media: dispersing text and image through each other, the book's design discovers a new interface. Each page exhibits an 'enormous development of surface relative to the amount of matter present'. The magnification of subdivisions (the page) produces new textua distributions intermediate between the solid and the gaseous.

The book inhabits its own neglected dimensions. It is a worked example of the view that writing and drawing enact and mobilise what they describe: in a CAD-dominated design culture, this redefinition of representation is timely and liberatory.

YVES SAINT LAURENT
ADAM GECZY, VICKI KARAMINAS

This book is an appraisal of Yves Saint Laurent's contributions to fashion, art and culture.

The enduring influence of Saint Laurent's designs in modern fashion is undeniable. Concepts introduced by Saint Laurent, like the tuxedo jacket for women and the sheer blouse and dress, have become staples in contemporary fashion, transcending their origins to become symbols of power, elegance and sexuality. His ability to anticipate and articulate the needs and desires of the modern woman has left a lasting blueprint for how fashion interacts with social change and individual identity. Moreover, even after his death at 71 in 2008, Saint Laurent's integration of art and fashion continues to inspire current designers, seen in the ongoing collaborations between high fashion and contemporary artists.

Saint Laurent was above all an artist of synthesis, of agglomeration and reshaping, of conglomeration and adaptation. His work is a fusion of the tactile and aesthetic with fancy and supposition for his interiors are not what were but could have been, a projection of imagination and personality.

THOM BROWNE

BENJAMIN WILD

In a little over twenty years, New York based fashion designer Thom Browne has decisively and permanently changed the fashion industry.

Through his clothes that are rooted in America's distinctive preppie style, he has challenged age-old conventions of tailoring by altering proportions and blurring gender boundaries. The cropped trouser, which has become a staple of people's wardrobes around the world, owes much to Browne's pioneering reinterpretation of the suit. Through highly choreographed catwalk shows, he has enlivened the presentation of fashion, creating soulful spectacles that variously critique and cherish common themes in human lives. Browne's influence within the fashion industry has been recognised through various awards.

FEELING BLUE

Colour and the modern British hospital
VICTORIA BATES

Feeling blue is the first book-length history of colour in modern hospitals.

It examines colour in relation to six key themes – hygiene, emotion, humanisation, homeliness, play, consumerism – which are tied together by the idea of the 'modern' hospital.

The book does not simply describe changes to the appearance of hospitals over time, but instead thinks expansively about the role of colour in shaping how hospitals felt. It uses colour to understand the layered meanings of modernity in twentieth-century Britain, and its relationship to the 'mundane' or everyday life of hospitals.

PERCY THOMAS

Modern Architecture as a National Service
ROBERT PROCTOR

Sir Percy Thomas was the most important twentieth-century architect in Wales, renowned for interwar civic buildings such as Swansea Guildhall and the Temple of Peace in Cardiff.

His architectural practice, Sir Percy Thomas & Son, designed much of the post-1945 welfare state and industry in Wales and beyond. In the late twentieth century, the Percy Thomas Partnership specialised in complex healthcare, industrial and public buildings, becoming an international practice.

This comprehensive, meticulously-researched history examines the architecture of Percy Thomas in depth for the first time, and explores its wider social and political significance.

GAMES OF TERROR

Halloween, Friday the 13th and the Films of the Stalker Cycle
VERA DIKA

This is a historical and structural study of the Stalker Film. As a subcategory of the more general Slasher Film, the Stalker Film is often characterised by an off-screen presence that dominates the visual field, and by a recurring combination of character and plot functions.

The Stalker Film responds to an ongoing cultural conflict narrativised as the fight to protect self and community, and does so within a specific 1978-81 historical period. As a postmodern work, the surface material of the Stalker Film alludes to past and ongoing cultural forms, to Alfred Hitchcock's Psycho, for example, to the theories of Sigmund Freud, or even to Laura Mulvey on the male gaze. These forms are not used to enlighten but are exploited to maximum visceral effect.

ACTION HEROINES IN THE 21ST CENTURY

Sisters in Arms
EDITED BY FRAN PHEASANT-KELLY, CHRISTA VAN RAALTE

Examines the collective agency of women in post-millennial action-led genres from television and cinema.

Action Heroines in the Twenty-First Century highlights the changing representation of female protagonists in recent action-led genres. It responds to an upturn in women-centred narratives over the past two decades, specifically, those that involve groups of women in action. The work demonstrates how this collective agency reflects an increasingly global rejection of violence towards women (illustrated through initiatives such as the #MeToo movement, and the united reactions to the deaths of Sarah Everard, Sabina Nessa and the deaths of young Iranian women detained by security forces in Iran in 2022).

NEO-VICTORIAN LESBIANS ON SCREEN

SARAH E. MAIER, RACHEL M. FRIARS

In Neo-Victorian Lesbians on Screen, Maier and Friars argue that the on-screen portrayal of lesbians situated in the long nineteenth century across various countries is at the very least a dual task; the imperative project of revoicing lesbian silence and female companionship is complicated by the lack of and/or complex representation of such women in the past.

The adaptations, with varying degrees of success, carefully manipulate the gaze of the viewer to illustrate both how crucial the act of looking proves to be for lesbian attachment in these films and how the viewer's own gaze changes the way the lesbian is represented.

A HISTORY OF ENGLISH SPELLING

SIMON HOROBIN

Popularly viewed as eccentric and illogical, dismissed by linguists as fixed and therefore uninteresting, English spelling is the Cinderella of modern linguistics. But it is a complex and fascinating subject. With a rich history of variation, English spelling has much to offer diachronic sociolinguists, while study of its history helps to explain many of today's apparent irregularities.

The story of its standardisation, beginning with the advent of the printing press, and the destandardisation currently being witnessed on social media platforms such as Twitter and Facebook, offers new perspectives on how technology drives linguistic change, and reveals fascinating insights into the ways in which variable spelling is being repurposed today.

Approaching translation as an interpretive process, but also a mode of literary emulation and cultural engagement with Petrarch's prestigious precedent, the collection explores the complex and interconnected trajectories of both poetic works in English and Scottish literary milieux.

THE CRITICAL SITUATION

Postmodern Literary Studies

ROBERT T. TALLY JR

The Critical Situation: Vexed Perspectives in Postmodern Literary Studies* comprises a diverse selection of essays that register the situatedness of critical theory and practice amid various intellectual, institutional, and cultural contexts.

In recent polemics, postmortems, or even celebrations, a number of prominent critics have suggested that 'theory' is dead, that the heyday of literary or critical theory is past and its insights passé, and that other less speculative or abstract approaches to literature and literary criticism be embraced. At the same time, however, resistance to these trends in criticism has emphasised the degree to which modern critical theory remains essential for any proper analysis of the present condition.

THE EUROPEAN BYRON

Mobility, Cosmopolitanism, and Chameleon Poetry

JONATHAN GROSS

Byron concealed himself in various literary disguises, a process he called 'mobility'.

In this study of influences on Byron's verse and Byron's European impact, I explore these borrowings and transformations as they manifested themselves in his reading. At issue is the very concept of romantic poetic voice.

Framing himself in the tradition of the Irish yet cosmopolitan Thomas Moore, Byron adopted continental guises, imitating both Italian writers and political heroes, such as Dante, Machiavelli, and Tasso. In establishing an Italian identity, Byron relied upon the Italian writers he translated (Pulci, Dante), Thomas Moore's 'Fudge Family in Paris', and Shelley's 'Julian and Maddalo', as well as Goethe's Faust.

THE VICTORIAN GHOST STORY

An Edinburgh Companion

EDITED BY ANDREW SMITH

The most thorough analysis of the Victorian ghost story to date.

The Victorian Ghost Story: An Edinburgh Companion invites readers to interrogate the multi-layered, multi-vocal conversations that occur within the Victorian ghost story. Its twenty-four chapters provide a historical overview of the development of the ghost story and explore it in light of the 'new' contexts of the 1800s, including mechanisation, imperialism, Romanticism and religion. As a much-needed survey of critical work on the ghost story, it features detailed analysis of major Victorian writers such as Charles Dickens, Margaret Oliphant, Charlotte Riddell and Henry James and it examines the places haunted by Victorian ghosts: haunted houses but also haunted museums, Fells, pyramids and seascapes.

RADICAL REALISM,
AUTOFICTIONAL NARRATIVES AND THE REINVENTION OF THE NOVEL

FIONA J. DOLOUGHAN

This monograph treats modes of fictionality in contemporary auto/biography, memoir and autofiction.

Within the context of what some writers see as the fabrication and fakery of the traditional novel and given their desire to move closer in their writing to the 'truth' of 'reality', the monograph focuses on the work of four authors (Karl Ove Knausgaard, Rachel Cusk, Jeanette Winterson, and Xiaolu Guo), all of whom have produced novels, as well as autobiographically informed works and accounts of their lives, along a fact-fiction continuum. Against the backdrop of a seeming hunger for reality, and a distrust of fabrication, the monograph is interested in revisiting assumptions about genre, with a view to problematising conventional understandings of what separates fiction and non-fiction.

CONTEMPORARY AMERICAN NOVEL

TIM LANZENDÖRFER

Examines the connection between historical and speculative fiction to offer a new form of literary-genre fiction that registers the upheavals of the early twenty-first century.

Utopian Pasts and Futures in the Contemporary American Novel highlights the emergence of a literary mode, speculative historicism, over the past two decades in U.S. literature. Discussing in depth novels by writers such as Ken Kalfus, Joyce Carol Oates, and Colson Whitehead, among others, it integrates questions of critical method, genre, form, and literary theory, all of which have some urgency today. This study explores the formal constitution, narrative choices, and place in the wider literary market of a mode that it believes to be constitutively important for understanding American literature's struggle with the possibility of imagining hopeful futures.

THE GIG PUBLIC

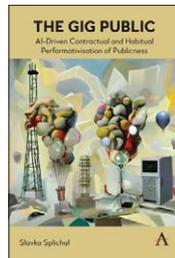

AI-Driven Contractual and Habitual Performativisation of Publicness

SLAVKO SPLICAL

This monograph explores the evolving nature of publicness in the era of digital communication and social media saturation, arguing that the rise of the 'gig public' represents a new paradigm that challenges the traditional conceptualisation of the public in shaping social and political change.

The gig public departs from traditional notions of publicness and the public, characterised by individuals' spontaneous and less-structured engagement in public discourse. This engagement is often hampered by challenges in fostering sustained interaction and depth of discussion, due to the ephemeral nature of online interactions.

PATRICK G. ZANDER

Reexamines the ideology and political program of Britain's interwar fascist and extreme right-wing groups, highlighting their contradictions and moral failings as they sought to restore national power through disengagement and isolation.

This book is a new assessment of the ideology and political program of Britain's fascist and extreme right-wing community during the interwar period (1919-1940). It examines this group's belief system as it clustered around three major preoccupations: Modernisation, Empire, and War. In doing so, the book identifies many inconsistencies, contradictions, and moral failings, which contributed to the failure of the far-right tendency in the interwar years.

INVOKING EMPIRE

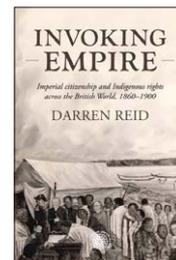

Imperial citizenship and Indigenous rights across the British World, 1860-1900

DARREN REID

Invoking Empire examines the histories of Canada, South Africa, Australia, and New Zealand during the transitional decades between 1860-1900, when each gained some degree of self-government yet still remained within the sovereignty of the British Empire.

It applies the conceptual framework of imperial citizenship to nine case studies of settlers and Indigenous peoples who lived through these decades to make two main arguments. It argues that colonial subjects adapted imperial citizenship to both support and challenge settler sovereignty, revealing the continuing importance of imperial authority in self-governing settler spaces.

FICTION, PHILOSOPHY AND THE IDEAL OF CONVERSATION

ERIN ELIZABETH GREER

Develops a literary-philosophical account of 'conversation' that reframes core concerns in contemporary ethics, democratic politics, and literary criticism.

The ideal of 'conversation' recurs in modern thought as a symbol and practice central to ethics, democratic politics, and thinking itself. Interweaving readings of fiction and philosophy in a 'conversational' style inspired by Stanley Cavell, Fiction, Philosophy, and the Ideal of Conversation clarifies this lofty yet vague ideal, while developing a revitalising model for interdisciplinary literary studies. It argues that conversation is key to exemplary responses to sceptical doubt in ordinary language and political philosophy – where scepticism threatens ethics and democratic politics – and in works of British fiction spanning from Jane Austen through Ali Smith.

CRITICAL MUSLIM 54

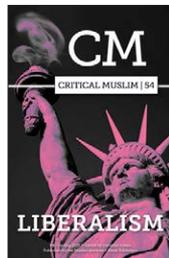

Liberalism

EDITED BY ZIAUDDIN SARDAR

Considers the world order through the lens of Islamic Studies. Critical Muslim is a quarterly magazine of ideas and issues, presenting Muslim perspectives on the great debates of our times.

Since its beginnings born out of the Enlightenment liberalism has risen to become the global standard; an almost utopian ideal, against which political and moral philosophies have been judged. Yet, one quarter of the way through the twenty-first century, we wonder if the liberal idea is all but dead. The freedoms imbued by civil and human rights, individualism and private property have built the modern world, but not without growing pains and vestigial aches. More than a simple philosophy, liberalism has informed economics, secularism, language and culture.
